

It's time to top dress

With the onset of cooler conditions it's time to think about your livestock's winter feed demands. There are several options, including supplementation with hay, silage and/or grain, however, one of the most cost effective methods is to grow more grass with the strategic use of additional fertilizer/growth hormone. Urea (containing 46% Nitrogen (N)) can be used at strategic times during the year to produce additional winter feed.

An application of nitrogen prior to September (when nitrogen is typically deficient) is a cost effective option for improving herbage mass.

Urea can also supply additional nitrogen to maximize spring hay. Urea may be applied to pastures anytime from now, depending on when the additional feed is required. Feed responses to nitrogen typically occurs 4-6 weeks after top dressing. The most effective rates of urea are 85-100 kg/ha.

In addition to urea, ProGibb SG offers an alternative option for increasing winter feed.

This is essentially a naturally occurring hormone (40% gibberellic acid) and should be applied in conjunction with urea (a few days after).

For more information on strategic fertiliser and ProGibb use drop in and chat to David and the team at Mitre 10 and CRT Wauchope. We're open 7am to 5pm Monday to Friday and 8am to 2pm Saturdays and Sundays.

Best outdoor paint

Wattyl Solagard is a well-known Aussie brand, and one we regularly recommend to customers looking for a sun-proof paint that does the job.

Wattyl claims it's "No. 1 under the Australian sun" and we'd have to agree.

Apart from being self-priming, it's effective in blocking the UV rays, is easy to keep clean and is breathable and tough.

Wattyl Solagard is available in low sheen, gloss, satin or masonry matt and comes with a 15 year guarantee (white base).

The four litre is currently on sale for $65.

Ten litre tins are also available for $166.
